

TOM FAHEY

Tom Fahey is a co-director of Macro Strategies at Loomis, Sayles & Company. He analyzes global investment conditions, conducts macro-oriented research to determine relative value between countries, currencies and asset classes, and develops tools and processes to facilitate investment decisions. Tom has 29 years of investment industry experience and joined Loomis Sayles in 2010. Previously, he was a senior portfolio manager and global bond strategist at Standish Mellon Asset Management. Prior to joining Standish, Tom worked at The Bank Credit Analyst (BCA) Research Group as a foreign exchange strategist. He earned a BA from St. Francis Xavier University in Nova Scotia and an MA from Concordia University in Quebec.